

ORREFORS

Orrefors

The history of Orrefors is the story of how the simplest ingredients – lime, sand and soda – can become magnificent glass objects. Fueled by the forest, the artists and designers made Orrefors a global leader in glass.

First, they produced glass jars for preserved foods in nineteenth-century Orrefors. As social movements and the notion of “more beautiful everyday goods” took hold around the turn of the last century, artists Edward Hald and Simon Gate were invited to the glassworks. They promptly began making new objects with color and engraving. The results became popular worldwide through exhibitions, interior design and objects for everyday use. Before long, glass from the forests of Småland was incomparable: There is nothing like it! “Il n’y a que ça!” exclaimed the 1925 World’s Fair in Paris.

More artists and designers joined Orrefors and the designs were refined and reconsidered. Hot glass contains infinite possibilities – for those who have mastered the skill. The glass made today is based on expertise generated over more than a century. The very best designers now continue to enchant the world with the brilliance and beauty of glass.

The story about the glass from Orrefors continues.

Beer

Erika Lagerbielke

With today's wide range of beer types, flavors, and origins, it's natural that beer enthusiasts would want to explore how the glass itself can enhance the overall experience. With Beer, Erika Lagerbielke and Orrefors have created a collection of glasses, each designed to complement beers like lager, pilsner, and IPA. The collection was launched in 2014.

Bloom

Lisa Hilland

Bloom was born from a question: Can a vase be as beautiful without flowers as it is with them? By borrowing nature's sense of geometry, Lisa Hilland created a design that is both simple and intricate. The glass is gracefully shaped to complement the removable metal top. Both parts reflect light, but in completely different ways. The metal mesh top also serves a purpose for those who want to use flowers in their Bloom: it allows for the creation of personalized arrangements. You can even place a single plant in it, embracing the Scandinavian minimalist style. The Bloom collection was launched in 2018.

City

Martti Rytönen

A bucket of ice, a small glass, a bottle of NIKKA WHISKY FROM THE BARREL, and a tall glass on the top tier of the bar cart.

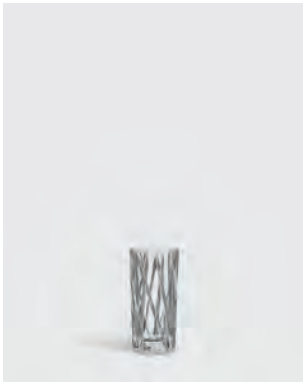

Two bottles of gin (LE TRIBUTAIRE and CHERRY STEM GRAPEFRUIT GIN) and three glasses on the bottom tier of the bar cart.

City

Martti Rytönen

Finding the right glass for a drink – the experience of drinking it – truly has the power to make the moment. Especially if the glass is from Orrefors. Like Martti Rytönen's collection City. The pattern's interplay of lines draws inspiration from the headlights' beams, dancing between the city's glass and metal facades. City evokes a cosmopolitan feel that adds the perfect touch, whether you are on an archipelago island or at a rooftop bar surrounded by skyscrapers. The collection was launched in 2016.

Cut In Number

Ingegerd Råman

Cut in Number

Ingegerd Råman

When creating Cut In Number, Ingegerd Råman applied Orrefors' extensive tradition of cut glass as a starting point – then took it in a new direction. While tradition calls for polished cuts, the cuts were instead left matte. The effect is a sharp emphasis on the geometrical pattern formed in the clear glass.

Cut In Number consists of four cylindrical objects: two bowls and two vases, all of which come with two different cut patterns, i.e. eight pieces in total. When the light meets the crystal and its geometric lines, it's evident that mathematics also possesses a poetic dimension. The collection was launched in 2021.

Difference

Erika Lagerbielke

When Difference was introduced, it was clear that this new collection was designed with a fresh, unique perspective in mind. Here, the taste experience was just as important as the visual and tactile enjoyment. Erika Lagerbielke collaborated with one of Sweden's leading sommeliers, Bengt-Göran Kronstam. Together, they explored the relationship between the shape of the glass and the experience of the wine's taste, aroma, and color. The glasses in the Difference collection are not based on the type of grape but on what characterizes the drink's nature: Crisp, Fruit, Mature, Primeur, Sparkling, or Sweet. Therefore, the conversation over a glass of Difference can focus less on preconceived notions and more on what truly matters: your wine experience. The collection was launched in 2002.

Discus brings out the essence of crystal. Its thick shape emphasizes the material's weight, while the subtle pattern on the underside refracts the light from a tealight, creating a shimmer around each candle holder, like shifting reflections on a water surface. Ebon

Claesson Koivisto Rune

The multidisciplinary architecture and design trio Claesson Koivisto Rune has spent a great deal of time in Japan. Based on the relationship between designer and producer, Orrefors and Claesson Koivisto Rune asked the question: Why instruct a glassblower to make each item identical? The Ebon vase shows that glass is a soft, glowing mass whose mobility slowly lessens as the temperature falls. Each vase is allowed to set into its own shape with the finishing touch applied by the glassblower. The result is a beautiful marriage between a strict framework and true individual execution. The collection was launched in 2020.

Enjoy

Erika Lagerbielke

Enjoy is a solitary piece created to pair with your favorite glasses. It comes in two sizes with a shared aesthetic, but different areas of use. The lower one, with a spacious body, is an ideal carafe for decanting. Fill it with a bottle of wine, and the surface will just reach the widest point of the carafe. As such the contact area is maximized, to optimize aeration. The taller, narrow style is intended for water and other beverages. The collection is designed by Erika Lagerbielke and launched in 2014.

Ensemble from Orrefors is a collection of two-part vases/containers from acclaimed British designer Benjamin Hubert. With muted colors and minimalist lines, Ensemble enhances any floral arrangement. That said, they can also serve as exquisite containers in a more general sense. Since the individual parts are interchangeable, you can choose exactly how to group and shape your Ensemble, inside and out.

Erik

Olle Alberius

The Erik collection for Orrefors adheres to the brand's preference for less color and minimalistic style. The collection includes essential barware items: an Old Fashioned glass, a Double Old Fashioned glass, a Highball glass, and a decanter for elegantly serving and storing spirits. Created with whisky enthusiasts in mind, Erik is designed to please both aesthetically and functionally. Designed by Olle Alberius.

Geometry

Clæsson Koivisto Rune

Geometry

Claesson Koivisto Rune

Spheres, cylinders and cones form the basis of the aptly named collection Geometry, a highly anticipated, new mouth-blown tableware collection for Orrefors by Swedish architect and designer trio Claesson Koivisto Rune. The perfectly crafted blend of minimalism, precision and elegance provides an unmistakable Orrefors identity where the intriguing geometric shapes and confident stature combine to deliver an iconic timeless design that captures both past and future. As the name suggests, the collection is based on familiar shapes: spheres, cylinders and cones. Cup, stem and foot have in essence been turned into stylized geometry. Geometry marries the best of Scandinavian contemporary design with the quintessential glass type for experiencing wine or other drink in full – thin, light crystal.

Gin & Tonic

Orrefors

Orrefors Gin & Tonic is inspired by the Spanish culture. Unlike the American tradition, where gin and tonics are served in a highball glass, bartenders in Barcelona often serve this popular drink in a glass with a large bowl. This provides plenty of room for both ice and garnishes, like rosemary or black pepper. The size and shape of the glass are also important for both the aroma and flavor: the bubbles in the drink serve as "aroma transporters". The large surface of Orrefors Gin & Tonic simply provides space for more bubbles, resulting in an unusually nuanced taste experience. The collection was launched in 2018.

Heart

Orrefors

The soft design of this collection connects to its name with thoughtfulness – Heart, as it is the universal symbol of love. With this collection, Orrefors Designs honors the romantics and those who wish to convey their love to one another. The clear glass of each item is thin, creating generous space for decorations and delivering elegance to the most extravagant settings as well as modest rooms. The collection by Orrefors Designs was launched in 2015.

Home Fragrance

Orrefors

Orrefors Designs brings multi-functionality to some of the brand's most popular barware collections – City, Peak, and Erik, as scented candles. The high-quality formula is poured into the Double Old Fashioned glasses from these collections, which eventually can be used to drink from once the candle has burned down. Each candle in Orrefors Home Fragrance delivers elegant harmony to every room. The collection was launched in 2019.

Ice Cube

Orrefors

Ice Cube by Orrefors demonstrates how a true master of the craft maximizes the fascinating yet simple nature of crystal glass. Göran Wärrf has shown the unique refractive qualities of the crystal by shaping the glass into a massive cube. Sunlight and a gentle tea light won't be perceived the same, but are both equally beautiful with this votive. The collection launched in 2001.

Informal

Björn Dahlström

Informal

Björn Dahlström

Informal is Björn Dahlström's first collaboration with Orrefors. The collection includes every glass you need around the modern dining table, and is an innovative marriage between Sweden's beautiful, high-quality glass tradition and today's more informal social customs.

The seemingly simple shapes are in fact carefully considered down to the last detail. The glasses are comfortable to hold and enhance the aroma and flavors of drinks without overshadowing them. The same elegant balance of form and function is perfectly demonstrated by the multiple usage of the clever bowl delivered with the carafe. It can be used as a practical coaster for the carafe, or to serve olives or appetizers. The collection was launched in 2021.

Intermezzo Blue

Erika Lagerbielke

Intermezzo Blue

Erika Lagerbielke

Erika Lagerbielke created a classic the year after she graduated from the University of Arts, Crafts & Design (Konstfack) in 1984. At that time, Intermezzo broke away from the colorless aesthetic that had been established in Sweden in the 1950s. Here was someone who wanted to make glass visible and fun, to allow it to be a statement-making element of a table setting. Instead of stepping away from Orrefors' legacy of beauty and tradition of craftsmanship, Lagerbielke took them both a step further. Intermezzo's wine glasses, drinking glasses and carafe, which are all still mouth-blown in Småland, were at the time more sensual than those of past generations. And sealed into the glass, rising up from the surface of the table, is a teardrop-shaped mystery. A small, but characteristic detail fascinating enough to inspire a conversation at any time. It has been doing just that for decades – Intermezzo is aesthetic sustainability personified.

Intermezzo Gold

Erika Lagerbielke

Intermezzo Gold

Erika Lagerbielke

Our craftsmen and Erika Lagerbielke have shared a long-standing ambition to fill Intermezzo's characteristic bubble with gold coloring (instead of the traditional blue). Only now have they succeeded – they're all perfectionists – but it was definitely worth the wait. Encased in the crystal-clear glass is now a matte drop shimmering like gold. Fittingly, the inception of Intermezzo Gold coincides with no less than three Orrefors' anniversaries: 125 years in Sweden, 100 years in the US and 40 years of collaboration with Erika Lagerbielke.

Intermezzo Gold includes a selection of glasses from the collection: Three wine glasses, three bar glasses, a water glass and a carafe, and, last but not least, the champagne glass – a favourite of the designer herself. Now with a golden drop that shines enough to compete with anything you pour on top of it.

Lumiere

Ingegerd Råman

When renowned Swedish designer Ingegerd Råman studied in Italy she was particularly attracted to studying flowers and candles which came to serve as a strong source of inspiration for what has become her hallmark: designs where all that is superfluous is removed, enabling a full focus on material and form.

Lumiere by Ingegerd Råman is no exception. A collection of candlesticks where the crystal-clear transparency of glass and the mirror-like metal are united in a shape that is equally minimalistic and striking. Lumiere was launched in 2021.

Merlot

Erika Lagerbielke

Merlot by Erika Lagerbielke was introduced in 1995. The objective of Merlot was to offer a tableware collection that elevate the taste experience without specifically being intended for wine connoisseurs. The collection received the Excellent Swedish Design award in its first year. In line with Orrefors' rich history, Merlot represents classic, finely crafted glass in an understated Scandinavian design in the spirit of less is more. This invisible quality may very well mean that your Merlot glasses will never need to be recycled – simply use and take pleasure in them time and time again, to trigger your own sustainable closed-loop initiative.

Metropol

Erika Lagerbielke

With the austere and elegant Metropol, Erika Lagerbielke continues in her own footsteps, from her breakthrough with Intermezzo and into the future. It has the same intriguing mystery that we know from Intermezzo - the sealed drop of color- but paired with another approach to color and style. The straight lines, like the name Metropol, bring modern city living to mind. Metropol includes glasses for champagne, red and white wine and beer. There is also a coupe, tumbler and a carafe which works equally well for water and wine. The collection was launched in 2017.

Midsummer

Midsummer may well be the most appreciated holiday in Sweden, with celebrations dating back to the Middle Ages. A fond custom dictates picking seven kinds of flowers and placing them under your pillow on Midsummer's Eve. The magic powers of the twilight night will then reveal your future partner in your dreams. Seeing the importance of the holiday, renowned designer trio Claesson Koivisto Rune and Orrefors have teamed up to create a collection of seven mini vases, inspired by and named after as many meadow flowers. While each of the seven vases has its own distinct character, they are also designed to group brilliantly, with one complementing the other.

Mingus

Vicke Lindstrand

Vicke Lindstrand's Mingus is a Swedish glass icon. It was designed for Orrefors in 1934 and has been mouth-blown here in Småland ever since. Mingus was launched as a martini pitcher, but is used just as often for ice water and other cold drinks. The pitcher has won numerous design awards and often represents Swedish glass design at national and international museums.

Erika Lagerbielke

More started as a restaurant collection. By interviewing restaurateurs about everything from form to function, Erika Lagerbielke was able to create a collection that today is as appreciated in star restaurants as it is for home gatherings and family dinners. Representative for all parts in the More collection – from wine and champagne glasses to the versatile multitumbler – is Lagerbielke’s ability to combine the elegance of premium tableware with functionality, reflecting how people socialize, eat and drink today: relaxed, inclusive and pleasant. The collection was first launched in 2013.

My Heart

Lars Hellsten

My Heart Votive is shaped like a heart – the universal symbol of care, warmth, and love. The votive is made of thick, clear crystal with a round hole, allowing the candle to sink down enough for the flame to beam through the glass, which brings a soft candlelight. Designed by Lars Hellsten.

Nobel

Gunnar Cyrén

Gunnar Cyrén is one of the great designers in Swedish glass history. In 1991, he created this set, which is still used at the annual Nobel Banquet at Stockholm City Hall – an unparalleled gala where invited laureates from around the world celebrate with over 1,000 guests, including members of the Swedish royal family, prestigious politicians, scientists and artists. The collection, which is mouth-blown in Sweden and hand-painted with details in real 21 carat gold, includes wine glasses, beer glasses, champagne glasses, a pitcher and a carafe. The entire Nobel set is now a highly coveted collectors' item, in both Sweden and internationally.

Peak

Martti Rytönen

Having grown up in North Karelia, Martti Rytönen has an inescapable relationship with nature. In the Peak barware collection by Orrefors, he pairs the magnificent authority of mountain tops with the ability of cut glass. The collection includes Old Fashioned glasses in two sizes, a Highball glass, and coasters and straws in classic warm-toned metal. The collection launched in 2018.

Precious

Malin Lindahl

Like the most precious of treasures, designer Malin Lindahl has designed jewels made of crystal glass – a vase, a bowl, and a platter – to adorn the contemporary home. The facets and the asymmetrical design refract the light beautifully and give the hand-cut Orrefors crystal an innovative, inspiring expression.

Puck

Lena Bergström

With the votive Puck, designer Lena Bergström connects the similarities between pure crystal and ice. Her inspiration comes from her childhood fishing trips to frozen lakes amidst the north of Sweden's mountainous landscapes. The shape and size of the votive relates to the diameter of an ice drill and the incredible precision with which it drills through thick, solid ice. Puck from Orrefors comes in two designs – one tall and one low. The collection was first launched in 1999.

Pulse

Ingegerd Råman

With the collection Pulse by Orrefors, Ingegerd Råman again shows her remarkable ability to achieve unique results through simplification. All Pulse glasses have a clean clear shape in common, as well as the characteristic curved bowl. There are wine glasses for every type of wine, including champagne, allowing for splendid table settings. The generous beer glass holds volumes of both drink and foam, and the tumbler elevates the simplest of beverages. The collection launched in 2013.

Raspberry

Anne Nilsson

Raspberry in clear crystal glass by Orrefors is a collection of bowls, vases, votive candle holders and a plate. Besides the name, it is evident where the inspiration for Raspberry's soft, bubbly contours comes from. The collection was introduced in 1992. Design by Anne Nilsson.

Reed

Monica Förster

reddot winner 2023

The vases in the Reed collection began as three-dimensional sketches in cardboard and paper, where Monica Förster showed how to bring character in the material by emphasizing its folds instead of hiding them. Transferred to glass, it gives a sense of organic movement. A quiet swaying in the hard glass. Reed by Orrefors is blown into a mold of clear or colored glass and is available in three different sizes. The large vase can be placed on the floor and in spacious rooms with large greens and florals, the medium size suits cut flowers, and a small one that is just right for tulips. A Red Dot Product Design winner, Reed was introduced in 2023 and is available in three colorways.

Sofiero

Gunnar Cyrén

With Sofiero, Gunnar Cyrén created a lasting Scandinavian glass classic. The collection consists of bowls, a vase, a barware set of three glasses, and a decanter. Sofiero is characterized by its signature deep-cut pattern, which rises all the way to the edge of the vase and bowls, for an appearance reminiscent of a royal crown. Today, Sofiero's status as a classic is reinforced by its connection to the "For Zealous and Devoted Service of the Realm" award, where people who have worked for the Swedish government for more than 30 years stand to be awarded with an engraved Orrefors Sofiero bowl. The collection launched in 1960.

Sparkling Devil

Gunnar Cyrén

Gunnar Cyrén was the talented designer behind the Nobel collection. In 2013, his sons found several sketches of never launched champagne glasses inspired by the snaps glasses in the Nobel collection from Orrefors. The selected design has resulted in luxurious stemware glasses in different color variations. The Sparkling Devil, which holds 6.5 oz, is mouth-blown in Sweden with hand-painted details in real 21 karat gold.

Squeeze

Lena Bergström

Like many other innovations, the idea for Squeeze arose by chance. While working on another shape entirely, Lena Bergström lost control of the sizzling, viscous glass, and the result was an asymmetrical inward bend. Inspired by her mistake, Bergström created Squeeze, intentionally reproducing its characteristic shape. The "squeezed" indentations interrupt the symmetry, while simultaneously serving a clear function: flowers placed inside are neatly held together rather than spread out, even those with only a few stems. The collection was first launched in 1997 and is available in multiple colors and sizes including the new impressive XL version.

Street

Jan Johansson

Street

Jan Johansson

Manhattan is home to an enormous number of bars. Having a drink at rooftop bars, fine restaurants and neighborhood pubs has always been a natural part of life in the city. With the Street barware collection, Jan Johansson has merged Orrefors' Scandinavian design tradition with inspiration from New York's world-famous grid system of streets and avenues. The crisp purity of crystal permeates each glass, including options for champagne to cognac and – naturally – a dry martini. In addition, Street includes a decanter and ice bucket with black details to provide contrast to the clear glass. The collection launched in 2006.

Tou

Clæsson Koivisto Rune

Tou

Claesson Koivisto Rune

Tou, designed by Claesson Koivisto Rune and Orrefors, shows how an established function can take on a new form. Inspired by the classic hurricane lamp, the designers have divided Tou into two components: a foundation in thicker glass, and a tall, thin-glass cylinder placed inside. The different layers and thicknesses reflect the room and the candle flame in a way that makes the eye linger. Set the table with Tou both outdoors and indoors. The candles are easy to light when you lift off the top. And with the tall glass in place, the flame burns quietly, even in an evening breeze. Tou is available in three sizes: a smaller one for regular tealights, a medium-size for large tealights and a large storm lantern for pillar candles or classic candles (a functional metal holder is included).

Valentino

Martti Rytönen

Valentino is a convergence of hard and soft elements. This thick, crystal-clear glass is shaped like a heart – the universal symbol of care, warmth and love. By also giving the heart a bulging shape, Martti Rytönen has made the glass almost appear to be pulsating. The votive holder has a round hole, allowing the candle to sink down at just the right level making the light visible through the glass, but still reaching up over the edge. The manufacturing technique of the bowl gives the inner edges a gently rounded look. Fill it with classic love letters written on paper, or with a little water and a few roses floating on the surface. The collection launched in 2010.

Annual Holiday Ornament

Orrefors

The Orrefors Annual Ornament is a dear tradition to us – and clearly to many more. As this year marks the 40th anniversary of its inception, it felt suitable to make it extra special.

In the holiday spirit of pause and reflection, we looked back to the ornament's origin, more specifically the very first edition. In 1984, Olle Alberius designed a crystal dove, and it took flight right from the start. Only right, then, that the Annual Ornament for 2024 is the Homage Dove.

This year's Annual Ornament is available in two executions – one in clear crystal glass and one limited edition hand-painted in 21-karat gold.
